Note on colour impressions and naturalness

Wood products from pur natur are completely natural products. The wood colour, knottiness and grain are unique to each tree due to a wide variety of growth conditions.

The colour impression of surface treatments on reference pictures with pur natur wood products is influenced by a variety of factors. Individual printer or screen settings can also affect colour perception. All images are therefore indicative.

We endeavour to show pictures, samples and display areas that are as representative as possible. Naturally, however, the products delivered will never be an exact match in terms of appearance..

If you have any questions about our products or are looking for a reference object, please contact us - we will be happy to help you.
